

Travis Heights until we reach my best dog buddy Baxter's house. Here, they trade me for a human boy named Wyatt, who seems to love school just as much. I get to have a nice long playdate with Baxter and then I get picked up by my human called Lauren.

I get home and take a huge snooze. Now comes my favorite part - stealing food. First, I make sure that my bigger humans are holed up in their private dens. Next, I decide what is an easy (tasty) target. Today, I will steal my small human's candy. I zero in on the piece I want, a large piece of taffy. I jump up on my hind legs and place my front paws on the counter - Oh no! Did you just hear those footsteps? Retreat! This is Ninja Eddie reporting in 10 minutes later. Mmm... Target acquired, wrapper and all.

My small humans just got home. Oh joy! I never thought I would see them again. Ugh, maybe I shouldn't have stolen that human-food. They play with me for a while, but really I'm just counting the minutes till 5 p.m. when I get (surprise surprise) more food! My humans eat too and then they go to their private dens. Everybody falls asleep and tomorrow the cycle starts again.

Life In Travis Heights: From A Dog's Point Of View

Article by Annabelle Davis

Hello, my name is Eddie, and I am a Labrador Retriever. My humans go by the names of Annabelle, Clementine, Lauren, and Marc. I love them to Petco and back. This is how a normal weekday goes for me: I get up early in the morning and - wait! I just found my tennis ball, hold on give me a second - anyway Marc feeds me and I go back to bed on my favorite pillow and I sleep for another hour.

The smaller humans wake up and get ready to leave for something called school. Can you believe it? Every single day. They must really love school to go there so much. Once they find their shoes (which is surprisingly difficult - I'm glad I don't need to worry about this) we leave on a walk! We sniff my favorite stretch of
